A Day of Traditions, Transitions & New Beginnings

By Caroline F. Tobias

USD's School of Law 39th commencement was a celebration of ongoing traditions as well as a ceremonial marker of important new beginnings and transitions. This memorable ceremony began with a congratulatory greeting to the class of '96 from recently appointed USD President Alice B. Hayes — her first address to a School of Law graduating class. In her remarks regarding the admirable achievements of the class, she emphasized that, "no one could do this for you," and "no one can take it away from you, ever." She concluded her speech with an inspirational passage — a greeting written nearly 2,000 years ago from Paul's letter to the people of Phillipi. (See quote on the following page).

While the 39th School of Law ceremonies were a first for President Hayes in her new role, they were the last for Sister Sally Furay '72 in her official role as USD vice president and provost. Sister Furay, who retired this June after 44 years of service to the university, was honored by the School of Law as the first honorary member of The Order of the Coif. Dean Kristine Strachan remarked that it was "with bitter-sweet emotion" that the school awarded this distinction to Sister Furay. She would be missed by all at the university, but most particularly by the students, staff and faculty at the law school where she taught for 20 years. Dean Strachan stated that in light of Sister Furay's accomplishments and dedication to the university, it was "most appropriate" that the law faculty elected Sister Furay as the initial recipient of this award in recognition of her commitment to "individual worth and dignity, academic excellence and diversity and service as an outstanding role model for women."

Membership in The Order of the Coif, a select national honor society, is a great achievement for the School of Law, and this commencement was a momentous occasion as 32 students from the class of '96 — the top ten percent — were recognized as the first group of USD graduates to become Coif members. These graduates had donned the small white doilies on their mortarboards which indicated their Coif membership, and they were recognized by Dean Strachan who asked each new member to stand as she called them by name.

Another notable first for the School of Law was the awarding of the newly established Thorsnes Prize for Excellence in Teaching. This annual award is based upon the vote of the entire student body with heavier weight given to the graduating class. Dean Strachan presented the Thorsnes Prize to Professors Cynthia Lee and Charles Wiggins because the students' votes resulted in a tie. Upon acceptance of the Thorsnes Prize, Professor Lee thanked the students and added that this year's graduation had special significance for her, because she began teaching the year that this class began studying law. Professor Wiggins also thanked the students and said that “this was the highest honor that I could receive as a teacher.” In addition, he stated that he and Professor Lee had decided to contribute a portion of their prize to the Student Bar Association for worthy projects — to show their appreciation to the student body.

This theme of traditions, transitions and new beginnings was echoed in commencement speaker Justice Richard D. Huffman’s address to the class of ’96. Justice Huffman has taught at the law school since 1972 and the students elected him Professor of the Year for the 1990-91 academic year. Justice Huffman was a member of the district attorney’s staff for 14 years, serving as chief deputy district attorney for ten of those years. During that time he received numerous honors, including Outstanding Prosecutor of the Year by the California District Attorney’s Association, Outstanding Public Lawyer by the San Diego Bar Association and Prosecutor of the Year by Citizens for Law and Order. In 1985 Justice Huffman was appointed to the Superior Court for the county of San Diego and in 1988 he was appointed to the Fourth District Court of Appeal for the state of California. He has served as an officer of the San Diego Bar Association and on the State Bar of California Commission evaluating judicial nominees.

Justice Huffman remarked that he has been a member of the law profession for over 30 years and that “never, never have I looked on this profession as one of which I’m ashamed or which I wished I had not entered.” However, he argued that it is time to rethink the legal system and that the graduates are faced with a mighty challenge — they need to influence change. He noted that while the United States legal system is viewed with envy throughout the world, there are still large segments of the population without access to legal representation.

“You have a permanent place in my heart, never stop improving your knowledge and deepening your perception so that you can always recognize what is best ... Fill your minds with everything that is true, everything that is noble, everything that is good, everything that we love and honor, and everything that can be thought virtuous or worthy of praise. Keep doing all the things that you have learned and have been taught. Then the God of peace will be with you.”

— Excerpt from apostle Paul’s letter to the people of Phillippi.

Natalie Villaflor '96 and Seonhae Kelly Shim '96 show off their congratulatory bouquets.

Linda Basile '96 listens to Justice Huffman's commencement speech.

Justice Huffman stated that the "glue which binds this nation is not common religion, common racial or common cultural heritage, but solely by our declaration that we are a People. Our declaration of society is expressed in our constitution and worked out in our laws."

"Indeed, typical on my part as an appellate judge I looked to see what others might have said ... in the past. ... I found an address by Judge Learned Hand to the Yale Law School graduates in 1931. There, Judge Hand was focused on the changes facing the world. The loss of the sense of security that people had and he spoke of the use of lawyers' skills to improve life in this country. And he said, in part, 'Nobody can and nobody today does feel that security which was the convention at the turn of the last century ... The condition of our survival in any but the meagerest existence is our willingness to accommodate ourselves to the conflicting interests of others, to learn to live in a social world. It is here that we can find a scope and meaning in our work as lawyers, which raises it out of the dusty routine of gaining our living. For the law is no more than the formal expression of that tolerable compromise we call justice, without which the rule of the tooth and the claw must prevail.' "

Justice Huffman concluded his address by congratulating the graduates on their achievements and informing them that when they have overcome the "minor obstacle" of the bar exam he is looking forward to welcoming them into the practice of law.

Richardson Scholars Program Established

A new USD School of Law scholarship program was established in the memory of Delroy M. Richardson '69, corporate secretary of San Diego Gas & Electric Company. This scholarship program has been created to help foster ethnic diversity within the law student population. Each Richardson Scholar will receive a $2,500 scholarship to help defray tuition and other education costs.

Delroy "Del" Richardson, a native of Chicago, Illinois, received a bachelor of arts degree in political science from the University of California, Los Angeles, a juris doctor degree from the University of San Diego and a master of business administration degree from National University.

Richardson worked for San Diego Gas & Electric from 1971 until his death in 1994. In his 23-year career at SDG&E, he served in a variety of positions, including assistant general counsel and assistant corporate secretary. In 1986, he was elected corporate secretary by SDG&E's board of directors.

Richardson received the USD Distinguished Alumni Award in 1978, and he was a long-time member of the School of Law's board of visitors. He also was involved with the law school's minority mentoring program and steering committee. He was a member of the Rotary Club, a captain in the U.S. Naval Reserve and a life member of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The Richardson Scholars Program has been made possible by a $25,000 endowment from SDG&E, an Enova Company. In addition, other private individuals and firms have been generous benefactors, including the following:

— Greta Richardson, the widow of Richardson, whose gift will be used to create two scholarships named for Gayle and Monique Richardson, the couple's daughters.

— Nissan North America Inc.

— Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton.

If you would like to join others in this memorial to Del, please send your check to the law school and note in the memo line "Richardson Scholars."

School of Law Admitted to The Order of the Coif

The School of Law is pleased to announce that it has been admitted to membership in the national legal honor society of The Order of the Coif. The law school was admitted as an official chapter of Coif in March after a lengthy and demanding process. With this acknowledgement, the School of Law joins an elite group of American law schools who are recognized for excellence of program, faculty and students.

Since The Order of the Coif's inception in 1902, just 75 law schools have been admitted to the distinguished rank.

"This distinction is an important honor for those students who receive Coif membership each year," said Dean Kristine Strachan, "and it enhances the School of Law's reputation locally, regionally and nationally.

Coif membership is a nationally recognized and highly esteemed badge of quality in legal education."

The top ten percent of the School of Law's graduates will be elected to The Order of the Coif each year (and for the two past years, retroactively). In addition, the school may elect one honorary member to the society annually.

John W. Strong, national secretary and treasurer of The Order of the Coif, wrote in his letter of announcement, "I believe that the USD School of Law can justifiably take pride in having achieved a quality in its program sufficient to meet the stringent requirements for membership ... Granting of the charter is an important event in the history of the school and tangible recognition of its present stature."

Ten Law Professors Recognized for Excellence

According to USD President Alice B. Hayes, "USD is a place of growing tradition," and part of that tradition includes a variety of recently established awards which recognize the university's outstanding faculty and their accomplishments. This year, ten members of the School of Law faculty have been named to distinguished positions in recognition of their extraordinary abilities and contributions to the law school and university community.

1996-97 Herzog Endowed Scholars:

Steven Hartwell
Walter W. Heiser
Michael B. Kelly

The Herzog Endowed Scholar award recognizes meritorious teaching or scholarly productivity in the area of law. The Herzog Endowment was established by Dorothy A. and Maurice R. Clark.

1996 Thorsnes Prize for Excellence in Teaching Recipients:

Cynthia Lee
Charles B. Wiggins

The Thorsnes Prize for Excellence in Teaching is awarded annually and is based upon the vote of the current student body with heavier weight given to that year's graduating class. The Thorsnes Prize was established by Michael T. '68 and Carole J. Thorsnes.

1996-97 University Professors:

Grant H. Morris
Virginia E. Nolan
Edmund Ursin

University Professor awards recognize senior faculty who have demonstrated outstanding cumulative career contributions in teaching, scholarship and service in support of the mission and goals of the university.

Warren Distinguished Professors of Law:

Lawrence A. Alexander
Roy L. Brooks

The Warren Distinguished Professor of Law award is a permanent honor bestowed in recognition of an extensive record of outstanding scholarly productivity. The Warren Family Endowment for Faculty Development was established by Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Warren, enabling the School of Law to recognize and retain distinguished faculty.

Award recipients: (clockwise) Professors Michael Kelly, Steven Hartwell, Edmund Ursin, Lawrence Alexander, Roy Brooks, Cynthia Lee, Grant Morris, Virginia Nolan and Walter Heiser. Missing: Professor Charles Wiggins.

Linowitz Urges Restoring Integrity to Legal Profession

By Patti Testerman

Following a gracious introduction by Dean Kristine Strachan, the venerable Sol M. Linowitz presented the twelfth annual Nathaniel L. Nathanson Memorial Lecture on March 20, to a packed audience in the Grace Courtroom.

In a heartfelt reflection on the legal profession today, Linowitz spoke about where the practice of law is heading and what might be done to move it in the right direction. This is a subject that Linowitz covered in his most recent book, The Betrayed Profession: Lawyering in the 20th Century. It is a book that Linowitz claims he did not want to write, but felt compelled to do so because in his eyes the profession seems to have lost its soul.

"Too many lawyers have forgotten who we are and what we are supposed to do," he said. Linowitz recalled that a half century ago, the law was an esteemed and honored profession. It was a "human profession," he said, when lawyers were concerned with people in turmoil and helped them achieve peace of mind.

"As a young lawyer in Rochester, New York, I had the exhilarating experience of dealing with problems on a human scale. I learned the deep satisfaction of solving problems," Linowitz said. "I came to understand that human relationships are the stuff of which law is made."

The USD School of Law was fortunate to welcome Linowitz as the 1996 Nathaniel L. Nathanson lecturer, in part because of the long personal and professional relationship between Linowitz and Nathaniel L. Nathanson, the law professor in whose memory the series is presented. In 1942, Nathanson hired Linowitz at the Office of Price Administration in Washington, D.C. "Nat was a very close friend and a wonderful human being, for whom I held the highest regard and affection," Linowitz said.

In her introduction, Dean Strachan praised Linowitz' distinguished career in both public service and the corporate world. Linowitz currently serves as honorary chairman of the Academy for Educational Development. He has served as either a director or trustee for over a dozen major corporations and non-profit institutions, including serving as chairman of the board of Xerox Corporation. In the civic and diplomatic arenas, Linowitz served under three presidents as ambassador, chaired the National Urban Coalition, was a co-negotiator of the Panama Canal Treaties and represented President Carter in the Middle East peace negotiations. From 1969 to 1994, Linowitz served as senior partner and senior counsel in the law firm of Coudert Brothers.

"It is typical of Linowitz not to have forgotten that at heart he is a lawyer, and one who has always practiced in accordance with the highest principles of the bar," said Carl Auerbach, Distinguished Professor of Law and 1995 Nathanson lecturer. "The students in my [Professional Responsibility] class were very much impressed and encouraged because they were hearing from someone with practical background and experience speak about the revival of what is noblest about the bar."

In his lecture, Linowitz emphasized that the law is becoming more a business than a profession. "We're seeing an increase in technological expertise, with a corresponding diminution in the human side of law," he argued. "Lawyers are making more and achieving less, and in the process, I'm afraid, they've lost a great deal of what they were meant to be." Linowitz deplored the current public perception of the practice of law as a "money-grubbing, profit-maximizing, hustling business."

"While I believe that our problems are real and deep, we lawyers can — if we are willing — deal effectively with them in a manner that will enhance our profession and restore the trust and respect once viewed about the bar," he said. Linowitz called upon businesses, law schools, law firms and society-at-large to help make the changes needed to improve the services and reputation of the legal profession.

What should be done? Several points were covered by Linowitz:

— Law schools should lead the reform movement. Linowitz believes that the emphasis on conflict and process leaves little time for discussing right and wrong.

— The educational background of law students needs to be broadened. "The legal system of the Western world is based on a large body of philosophic, social and literary history. It's important for young law students to learn that so they can be people of breadth and learning," he said. "Law students should be encouraged to take courses in science and philosophy and even psychiatry as part of their training ... No one can be a truly competent lawyer unless he or she is a cultivated person."

— Create innovative solutions to help students with the burden of financing a law school education. For example, allowing students to function as public defenders as an alternative method for repaying part of their debt would be a valuable investment in our system of justice.

— Law firms, especially large influential offices, should reclaim their responsibility to all of society. They need to work with bar associations to do a better job of assuring the availability of legal services to those in need. "If the legal profession does not stand for equal justice under the law, it's hard to see what it does stand for," Linowitz stated, and called upon every lawyer to make a contribution of time or money toward the goal of providing equal justice for all.

— Society needs to promote a "wide-scale understanding of the forces that shaped and nourished our legal system," Linowitz said, beginning with the education of children in elementary school.

Toward the conclusion of his lecture, Linowitz reminded his listeners, "When we are truly committed to the principle of equality of access to the law, when the lawyer accepts the obligation to serve all of us in our society, then and only then will we lawyers find we have won and deserve the appreciation and respect of those we serve. Then and only then will we once again be able to say with dignity and honor, I am truly proud to be a lawyer."

School Ranked High in Two New Ratings

USD School of Law received high marks in a new statistical rating system of law schools which is based on ABA data. The school achieved a ranking of 28th out of 179 ABA-approved law schools on an Institutional Index based upon such factors as enrollment, age of institution, annualized growth since ABA approval, number of J.D. degrees awarded, student attrition and ratio of faculty and service staff to students.

This ranking system was developed by Thomas E. Brennan Sr., a former Chief Justice of the Michigan Supreme Court, as a counter to the U.S. News and World Report ratings. Although the U.S. News ratings are frequently cited by prospective law students, they are considered highly subjective and have been criticized for that reason. Approximately 40% of the U.S. News ranking is based on the survey results of legal professionals — selected lawyers, judges, law professors and deans — who are asked to rank law schools into four quartiles. Critics of this methodology question whether or not the professionals surveyed can reasonably and accurately assess all 179 of the nation's law schools.

While the ABA has steadfastly refused to rank law schools, it does publish statistics on virtually every aspect of legal education in the United States. For his 400-page study, "Judging the Law Schools," Brennan drew his statistical measures from the ABA's 1994 Review of Legal Education in the United States.

Brennan's methodology consisted of creating fifty categories of information from the ABA data, such as enrollment, diversity, tuition cost, library resources, and ratio of students to faculty and administration. The fifty categories were then divided into five indexes, each descriptive of a general aspect of legal education. Brennan asserts that his rankings are valuable not only for their greater objectivity, but because the schools are ranked on many different measures. Thus, students are better able to select schools which match their professional and personal preferences.

In addition, USD ranked in the top 25% of law schools in a new student satisfaction ranking by National Jurist Magazine. The ratings are based on a survey conducted by the Princeton Review over the past two years of law students at 170 ABA schools. Their criteria included: quality of teaching, faculty-student relations, diversity, intellectual challenge, research facilities and quality of student life.

JCLI Hosted Conference on Religion and the Constitution

A symposium of nationally known scholars on religion and the constitution was held at the School of Law in February. The conference was sponsored by USD's Journal of Contemporary Legal Issues (JCLI), which will publish a symposium issue featuring the papers written by the participants. The conference was organized and chaired by School of Law Professor Maimon Schwarzschild, editor of the JCLI symposium issue.

The participants, in addition to Schwarzschild, were professors John Garvey of Notre Dame University, Abner Green of Fordham University, Douglas Laycock of the University of Texas, Ira Lupu of George Washington University, William Marshall of Case Western Reserve, Michael Perry of Northwestern University, Suzanna Sherry of the University of Minnesota and Steven Smith of the University of Colorado.

The views of the participants ranged across a broad spectrum: Sherry, Green and Marshall favored the traditional "high wall of separation" between religion and public life, whereas Garvey, Smith and Schwarzschild believe the federal courts have imposed an exaggerated "secularism" on the Constitution during the past fifty years.

"Free exercise of religion" was also a prominent topic at the conference. Laycock was one of the leading sponsors of the "Religious Freedom Restoration Act," a law that Congress passed almost unanimously in 1993. The Act requires generous religious exemptions from otherwise-valid laws.

Judges Participate in Lou Kerig Criminal Law Competition

The Appellate Moot Court board invited Judges Betty Fletcher and Stephen Reinhardt from the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and Justice Richard Huffman of the California Court of Appeals to USD to judge the final round of the Lou Kerig Criminal Law Competition on April 12. Four USD students addressed this distinguished panel on a case involving the federal sentencing guidelines and the extraterritorial reach of U.S. law. The finalists were Alison Cohen, Steve Nelson, Donna Lee Schubert and Brent Triff. Best Brief honors went to Ann Linnehan and Donna Lee Schubert and Best Oralist honors went to Ernest Bell.

Before the competition, Judge Fletcher shared her wisdom and perspective on the legal profession at a reception sponsored by the Women's Law Caucus and the Pro Bono Legal Advocates. Judge Fletcher was appointed to the Ninth Circuit directly from private practice in 1979 by President Carter. In 1992 she received the ABA Margaret Brent Women Lawyers Achievement Award.

In addition to judging the Moot Court competition, Judge Reinhardt discussed current issues facing the federal judiciary at a brunch hosted by the Moot Court and Law Review boards. He was appointed to the Ninth Circuit by President Carter in 1980 and sits in Los Angeles. Judge Reinhardt has served as a member of the United States Commission on Civil Rights and the Los Angeles Police Commission.

The remaining final round judge is a familiar face to USD law students. Justice Huffman teaches criminal law and criminal procedure as an adjunct professor at the School of Law and was named Professor of the Year in 1991. He is a former district attorney and was honored as Prosecutor of the Year in 1984.

This competition marked the culmination of the Moot Court board's effort to renew a tradition of hosting distinguished jurists to judge USD's Moot Court competitions. Superior Court judges presided over each semi-final round panel. The Moot Court board extends sincere thanks to all who helped make the competition a success.

Dean Presents First Series of Roundtable Luncheons

In October, the first of Dean Strachan's newly established roundtable luncheons was held in the faculty reading room of Warren Hall. A small group of students met informally over lunch with Leonard B. Simon, a partner with the complex litigation firm of Milberg, Weiss, Bershad, Hynes & Lerach with offices in San Diego, San Francisco and New York. The spring roundtable was held in March, and Douglas E. Scott was invited to speak. He is general counsel of Science Applications International Corporation with offices in La Jolla, Calif. and McLean, Va.

The roundtables give law students the opportunity to meet distinguished members of the legal community who discuss current trends in the field of law, the skills essential to good lawyering and the steps to success for a particular practice specialty. Both Simon and Scott spoke enthusiastically about their careers and intrigued students with the breadth of their knowledge and experience.

The roundtable luncheons were established to create a forum for students to meet with members of the bar and hear their candid impressions of law practice in the '90s. The law school also expects the program to produce many valuable mentoring opportunities for students. Students have expressed interest in welcoming future roundtable speakers from the areas of criminal prosecution and defense, intellectual property, international law and business practice. We invite our alumni community to participate as roundtable speakers. Please express your interest by contacting Career Services at (619) 260-4529.

Dean Kristine Strachan presides over roundtable luncheon series.

Russell Block and Judge Judith Keep '70 applaud as Sister Sally Furay '72 receives the Author E. Hughes Career Achievement Award.

Sister Sally Furay Stepping Down

For her 44 years of service to USD and its predecessor, the San Diego College for Women, USD's Vice President and Provost Sister Sally Furay '72 was honored as the 1996 Author E. Hughes Career Achievement Award Recipient from the School of Law. The Hughes Career Achievement Awards were established in 1995 in honor of now retired USD President Author E. Hughes. At the event, many voiced admiration and respect for Sister Furay, for her accomplishments as an educator, a member of a religious order, an attorney and a community leader. In addition, a video tribute to Sister Furay was presented which included accolades from School of Law Dean Kristine Strachan and former Congresswoman Lynn Schenk '70.

Maria Arroyo - Tabin Honored by Women's Law Caucus

The Honorable Maria Arroyo-Tabin '79 is congratulated by her family at the Women's Law Caucus reception: (l to r) daughter Tiffany, husband Leo, daughter Taylor and Arroyo-Tabin.

On March 29, the Women's Law Caucus hosted the sixth Annual "Celebration of Women in the Law" at a wine and cheese reception. The Honorable Judith Keep '70, chief judge of the Federal District Court, presented the 1996 Outstanding Alumna of the Year award to the Honorable Maria T. Arroyo-Tabin '79. Arroyo-Tabin was chosen by the Women's Law Caucus for her dedication to the legal profession, to the community and to the students of the USD School of Law. She is a juvenile court referee for the San Diego County Superior Court, a founding board member and past president of the San Diego Volunteer Lawyer Association (SDVLP) and has been an adjunct professor of law at USD since 1984.

In her acceptance speech, Arroyo-Tabin thanked the students for the honor and spoke about how rewarding maintaining her close relationship with USD has been for her. Attending the event were her husband, Leo Tabin '79, and her daughters, Tiffany and Taylor, as well as many from the USD community. Included among the guests was the Honorable Adrienne Orfield '79, municipal court judge for San Diego County, who was last year's recipient of this award.

School of Law Expands Graduate Programs

Administrative Director of Graduate Programs Judith Carbone '94

In January, the School of Law welcomed back one of its own, Judy Carbone '94, as the new administrative director of Graduate Programs. Before returning to USD, Carbone practiced labor and employment law at Ballard, Rosenberg & Golper in Universal City, Calif. Carbone says that while she enjoyed practicing law, she was happy to come back to USD. "I look forward to the professional growth this position will provide, as well as the challenge to expand the graduate programs. There's a lot of untapped potential here." Prior to law school, Carbone was a recruiter and manager at Boston University's Division of International Programs and managed programs in Washington, D.C., London, Oxford and Niamey, Niger.

This fall the USD School of Law will add a master of laws in international law as its newest degree option at the post-J.D. level. The international law degree compliments the existing degrees in taxation and comparative law (for foreign lawyers) as well as the various areas of concentration in the general master of laws program. Currently, approximately 60 full-time and 40 part-time graduate students are working toward earning their LL.M. degrees. Because of the interest American lawyers are expressing in obtaining additional training and the increase in enrollments in the comparative law program, much growth is projected for the international law area.

"Our goal is to further internationalize our curriculum to benefit all students — J.D.s and LL.M.s alike," stated Carbone. "Many of the foreign lawyers who attend our LL.M. program practice international business law with U.S. firms overseas or have American clients and wish to expand their knowledge of U.S. corporate law. These lawyers will now be in classes with American attorneys in our international LL.M. program, which will create an international network of lawyers linked by USD."

In addition, Carbone said that, "For the past fifteen years, USD's tax program has become one of the leading programs in the country. Many of our alumni have expanded their practices to include more complex estate planning or tax conflict work, and have attributed their ability to keep up with the changes in the law to getting their LL.M." Over the next several years, Graduate Programs anticipates adding specialties and new areas of concentration for attorneys who wish to specialize in their practices. Also, limited merit scholarships are now available for graduate studies at the law school.

A First For USD — Law Student Elected to National Board

Tamela Choma '97

USD law student Tamela Choma was elected to be the western regional director of the National Black Law Students Association for the 1996-1997 academic year. She is the first USD law student to hold a national office on the NBLSA executive board.

"My goal is to increase USD's BLSA participation within the regional and national organization." She is also committed to enhancing "the political power of the western region," said Choma.

As western regional director, Choma will serve and address the concerns of black law students throughout Alaska, Arizona, California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington. She will have executive authority over the business and activities of the western region, and will be responsible for implementing nationally-mandated projects and organizing regional conventions — including next year's national convention in Las Vegas.

Choma will also represent the western region within local, regional and national legal communities by serving as a non-voting board member and/or delegate in other organizations. These include the California Association of Black Lawyers, the American Bar Association, the Congressional Black Caucus and local chapters of the National Bar Association.

National Trial Team Victorious Again

For five successive years, USD's national trial team has been voted the best trial team in the Ninth Circuit after competing against law schools from California, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Alaska and Hawaii at the Association of Trial Lawyers of America Western Regional Competition.

First Place Champions:

Advocate Team — Larissa Kosits, Tara Lee
Witness Team — Michelle Paradise, Ryan Saba

Second Place Champions:

Advocate Team — Kelly Schorr, Cindy Skinner
Witness Team — John Campbell, Emily Goldbach

Trial Team Coach:

Professor Richard "Corky" Wharton '73

The School of Law thanks the firm of Thorsnes, Bartolotta, McGuire & Padilla and Michael Thorsnes '68 for their support of the national trial team.

Students' Essays Addressing Issues of Diversity to be Published

Two USD law students who graduated this May will be seeing their words in print in the academic journals of other law schools. Marty Lorenzo's essay "Diversity Admissions Programs: Furthering a Compelling Interest" has been accepted by the University of Michigan for publication in the Michigan Journal of Race and Law and Alison Matsumoto's essay "A Place for Consideration of Culture in the American Criminal Justice System: Japanese Law and the Kimura Case" has been accepted by the Journal of International Law & Practice which is published by the Detroit College of Law at Michigan State University.

Professor Mary Josephine Newborn Wiggins

Professor Receives "Women of Vision in the Law" Award

Professor Mary Jo Newborn Wiggins was an honoree at the "Women of Vision in the Law" 75th anniversary gala awards dinner sponsored by the League of Women Voters of San Diego on April 27, 1995. At this prestigious event, Professor Wiggins received an award for her contribution to legal education after being nominated by the Earl B. Gilliam Bar Association. She was recognized as the first African American woman to earn tenure at the School of Law where she teaches and writes in the areas of commercial law, bankruptcy and critical perspectives on the law.

Thanks to Adjunct Faculty

Each year, approximately 50 to 60 courses and skills sections offered at the University of San Diego School of Law are taught by adjunct members of the faculty. Lawyers and judges play a critical role in the education of law students. As part-time faculty, they teach small sections of clinical courses, specialized advanced courses and graduate tax courses. Special thanks to the following people who gave so much time and effort to improve the quality of education for our law students in the 1995-96 academic year.

Career Services Wants Your Job Listing

The USD School of Law Career Services office is asking alumni to participate actively in their job listing network. Each year Career Services receives more than 850 listings directly from law firms, government, business, academic and public interest employers nationwide. Listing a position is as easy as making a phone call or sending a fax. Please call Career Services for additional information. Thank you for your continued support!

TYPES OF POSITIONS

• LAW CLERKS

Second, third and fourth year law students are available for short-term projects or on-going clerking positions throughout the academic year and summer. (Full-time day students must follow ABA policy limiting employment to 20 hours or less per week during the academic year.)

• POST-BAR CLERKS

Law graduates awaiting California bar exam results are available for temporary part-time or full-time positions beginning in March and August each year.

• NEW ADMITTEES & EXPERIENCED ATTORNEYS

New admittees are available after admission to the California Bar beginning in May and December each year. Attorneys from all practice areas with one or more years of experience are available throughout the year.

LISTING YOUR POSITION

Upon receipt, your job listing will be immediately available to students and graduates in the Career Services Job Books. It will also be included in USD's Law Alumni Job Newsletter which is mailed monthly to alumni nationwide.

PHONE (619) 260-4529 M-W 8:30-6:00; Th-F 8:30-5:00 (voice mail available after-hours) FAX (619) 260-6828

Swearing-In Breakfast Begins New Tradition

On December 7, 1995 USD's Law Alumni Association held its first California State Bar Swearing-In event. Over 70 alumni and their family members were treated to breakfast at the Hyatt Regency in downtown San Diego prior to the swearing-in ceremony. Many board members, judges, faculty and staff were present to congratulate and applaud the achievements of these accomplished alumni. Former Law Alumni Association President Patricia A. McQuater '78 addressed the group, motivating the new lawyers on their road to success. Look forward to this annual event!

These group photos of alumni may be ordered by contacting the Alumni Relations Office at (619) 260-4692.

Strong Showing at Recent Alumni Program Reception

Victor Felix-Perez '95, Kathleen Dwinells '96, Richard Kim '95 and Vi Bui '95 (l to r) mingle at this popular event.

The fourth annual recent alumni program event was held on Thursday, March 7 at one of downtown San Diego's popular micro-breweries, Cramer's At Old Columbia. This networking gathering is held every March for alumni who have graduated within one to seven years. New alumni enjoy this get-together because it's casual, social, and best of all ... it's free!

This year's event was a great success. Approximately 200 alumni attended — which is almost twice the size of last year's reception. Judges from the School of Law's alumni association board and board of visitors attended as honored guests. The event, which is an ideal time for visiting with old and new friends, continues to grow in popularity every year. Alumni are already talking about next year's get-together. Be there!

Colonel Gamboa Recognized for Achievements

Colonel Glenn J. Gamboa, class of 1970, was honored by Dean Strachan for his achievements at the School of Law regional reception held in Washington, D.C., at the historic Hay-Adams Hotel on November 2, 1995. Colonel Gamboa holds the position of appellate military judge in the USAF Court of Appeals. His office at McGuire Air Force Base was selected as the Outstanding Staff Judge Advocate Office in the military Airlift Command in both 1988 and 1989. Colonel Gamboa has served in the military since 1971 and he has been awarded the Air Force Commendation Medal and the Air Force Meritorious Service Medal (seventh Oak Leaf Cluster). Colonel Gamboa and his wife, Betty, visited and shared law school stories with alumni and guests.

Dean Strachan and the alumni office extend their gratitude to Baker & Botts partner Steven Hunsicker '75 and his staff for serving as the Washington, D.C. regional host.
